NED CREIGHTON IS TALKING FOR ADAMS

Hotel Man's Young Lieutenant In Phoenix Thinks His Boss is Abused

PHOENIX, April 12.—"Enemies of J. C. Adams are building up a straw man, hoping later to get a chance to knock it down to the injury of Adams. I say this because Adams has never been an applicant for the position of United States marshal, or any other federal position."

"Ben Daniels will be United States marshal at least eight months longer. His term does not expire for that length of time."

Ned Creighton, one of Adams' ablest lieutenants, made this statement when asked for the latest dope from Washington.

"For several days," he continued, "certain people have been trying to make it appear that Adams did not go to Washington to get any territorial job, and that his friendship for Young and desire to do what he could for the party as a whole was his real object."

"Nothing would please certain people more than to be able to say that Adams had tried to get a federal job and had been turned down. For this reason and no other they have been trying to make it appear that he was after Marshal Daniels' job."

No secret was made of the fact when President Roosevelt turned the job over to President Taft that Taft should continue Ben Daniels as marshal in Arizona.

Taft is expected to fulfill this request, which means that Daniels will stay on till his term expires, if not longer. Roosevelt made an almost historical blunder in making Daniels marshal in the face of bitter opposition in the senate that held up the confirmation for several weeks.

Friends of Overlock in Douglas are openly saying that one of Smith's campaign pledges in order to help Ralph Cameron was that he would endorse and support Overlock for marshal. It is believed that Smith is keeping his word.

While it may appear that the recent appointment of Judge Sloan and George Young were selections that will harmonize the republican party in Arizona, there is still reason to believe that there is just as great lack of harmony in the ranks as there ever was.

Friends of Sparrows.

Rider Haggard classes sparrows with rats as "vermin" and recommends a campaign against them. However, sparrows have had plenty of friends in past ages. Catullus' poem about his Lesbia's pet sparrow is one of the prettiest things in Latin literature and in a passage of Plautus "sparrow," "dove" and "hare" occur together as terms of endearment. Peppys, too, writes of a pet sparrow: "To dinner with my father and sister and family, mighty pleasant, all of us; and, among other things, with a sparrow that my Mercer hath brought up now for three weeks, which is so tame that it flies up and down upon the table, and eats and pecks, and does everything so pleasantly that we are mightily pleased with it."

A Fair Description.

Little Helen asked who it was that made the wind, and she was told, God. One day, after a severe wind storm, she came running into the house exclaiming: "Oh, mother! God blew the barber's sign down!" — Harper's Weekly.

WROTE NOTE AT THE POINT OF GUN

Details of the Tragedy in Which Charles Coleman
Lost His Life

The following article is from the Florence Tribune and gives the particulars of the killing of Charles Coleman, who was known as a very bad character in Bisbee:

"District Attorney O'Connor and Sheriff McGee returned from Saco Tuesday, bringing with them the first particulars of the killing which took place in the smelter camp."

"A man by the name of Charles Coleman, it seems, followed a woman over from Bisbee to Saco, whom he claimed was his wife. The woman had arrived there several weeks prior to her so-called husband's arrival and was living in a tent situated some distance in the rear of Tom Wilson's saloon. When Coleman arrived he walked into Wilson's saloon and asked Tom, who was standing behind the bar, if his name was Wilson. Tom answered in the affirmative and then Coleman quickly drew a revolver and abbed the muzzle of it against Tom's stomach at the same time exclaiming: 'Hand over your gun!'

Tom threw up his hands and exclaimed: 'I haven't any gun!' Still keeping Tom covered, Coleman edged around the end of the bar and espied a revolver lying on a shelf beneath the bar. He took possession of the gun and also a box of cartridges lying beside it. He then asked where Shoemaker was and Tom said he is in town. Coleman then made Wilson write a note to Shoemaker, telling him to come down to the saloon, as the woman was sick and needed him. When the note was finished Wilson told Coleman there was no one on the premises to take the note to Shoemaker but that he would take it up himself. 'No, you will not get away from me that way; I am going to kill all three of you.' A few moments later, Coleman, thinking he had possession of all the fire arms in the saloon, went out to the tent and began to curse and abuse the woman. But he had overlooked a 30-30 rifle sitting behind some boxes, and as soon as he passed out of the door Wilson grabbed this gun and stepping to the door sent a ball through the center of Coleman's back. The latter jerked both pistols from his belt and whirled around, but plunged forward on his face dead before he could fire at the falling man. This was the explanation of the compact that was made to bring harmony into the republican ranks in Arizona."

THE OPERATIC TOREADORS COMPANY SCORES ANOTHER BIG HIT AT THE ORPHEUM.

Another packed house greeted the Operatic Toreadors Company last night at the Orpheum theater. They gave an entire change of program, all new and up-to-date features. Pearce and Roelva created applause after applause from one of the most enthusiastic audiences with their fine singing. The cowboy song rendered by them in their opening act was a grand spectacular and scored a big hit. The duet scene from "Carmen" was the best ever heard in any great metropolitan attraction. Mr. Pearce and Miss Roelva both have remarkably fine voices and they alone are worth more than the price of admission. Mack and Elliott, the clever black face ring and dance comedians, kept the house in an uproar of laughter. Their imitations of the ball game, introducing back and well received. The O'Connor, Saunders company, in their comedy rural drama, scored a success. Both Mr. O'Connor and Miss Saunders are dramatic artists of merit. The company are all exceptionally good and give a clean, moral show.

A special matinee will be given to-day at 7:30 p. m. An entire change will be given again on Friday night.

CHURCH MEETING A BIG SUCCESS

Rev. Kanarr Gives Good Account of Baptist Anniversaries at Phoenix

Rev. John E. Kanarr pastor of the First Baptist church of this city has returned from Phoenix, where he was attending the annual meeting of the Arizona Baptist Anniversaries.

He stated yesterday to a Review reporter that the convention was the largest and by far the most enthusiastic of any ever held in the history of the territory.

Twenty-five churches were represented in all, and each had a much larger representation than ever before. Aside from the regular representatives, there were a number of foreign missionaries and national workers present at the gathering.

The past year has been one of marked progress in all lines of missionary activity, and a showing was made at the recent gathering in the capital city that was a revelation to even the most optimistic.

Many interesting reports from different pastors were heard and an intense desire to accomplish large things during the coming year.

A LIFE SKETCH OF GEORGE YOUNG

Newly Appointed Secretary
First Arrived in Territory in Year 1893

George U. Young is a native of Indiana, and is 42 years old. Before coming to Arizona, he practiced law and taught school in Kansas. He arrived in Williams, Ariz., in 1893. His first job in Arizona was as locomotive fireman, and it is said that while he was firing an engine he gave the best there was in him to that work. It is said that this determination to do whatever he was doing with all his might, displayed first in Arizona in an engine cab, is that to which he owes his success in life. From firing an engine Mr. Young went back to the school room and was principal of the public schools at Williams from 1895 to 1898.

While principal of the Williams schools, Mr. Young became the owner of the Williams Sun, which paper, under his management, soon came to have a wide circulation and to have much influence in northern Arizona. Notwithstanding the fact of being a consistent republican, Mr. Young's paper was independent in politics, and devoted its main energies to the development of northern Arizona's resources. It was due to his efforts, ably assisted by Buckey O'Neil, that the railroad was built from Williams to the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

This railroad, has done more to develop Williams and northern Arizona than any other factor. One would think that with a school scope for his talents and energies, but such was not the case. He became interested in mining and has been in that line of business, on a constantly expanding scale ever since the early days of his newspaper work. Later, becoming interested in the Derby group of mines, he left the Williams office, Mr. Young disposed of his paper at Williams, resigned his position with the schools and has since devoted a large part of his time to the Derby mines and to other mining enterprise, in which he is interested. Through all the dull times incident to the recent panic, Mr. Young has kept his work going, employing many people and keeping a steady stream of money coming into the country in which he is operating.

Politically, Mr. Young has always been active and prominent in the councils of the republican party. He has never allowed his party opinions to interfere with his business or social relations, and has many friends among democrats as among republicans. He was secretary of the territorial republican central committee in 1902 and was again selected to fill that position in 1908. It was due largely to his energy and systematic work that the democratic territory of Arizona, returning a republican delegate to congress.

Mr. Young was married at Williams to Miss Smith, a member of one of the leading families of northern Arizona, and the daughter of a most enthusiastic democrat. Mr. Young has a host of friends in Prescott, where he makes his home and is regarded there as a most valuable citizen.

Descendants of Signers of Declaration of Independence Make Pilgrimage to Grave of Jefferson

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 12.—A notable company of men and women arrived here from Washington today on the first annual pilgrimage of the Society of the Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence to the home and tomb of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello. The day was appropriately chosen, as it was the 176th anniversary of the birth of Jefferson. On the way to Monticello the visitors stopped here to attend the founders' day exercises at the University of Virginia, and to listen to an address by Martin B. Littleton of New York.

Luncheon was served on the university campus, the visitors being the guests of the faculty and students of the university, and following this the trip to Monticello was made. At the tomb of the author of the Declaration of Independence the exercises consisted of addresses, vocal music, etc., and the placing of wreaths upon the tomb by members of the society.

The Society of the Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, under whose auspices the pilgrimage was conducted, was organized July 4, 1907, as a part of the Independence Day celebration at the Jamestown exposition by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Association of the United States. Following this preliminary organization, at which officers were elected and a constitution adopted, the society was permanently organized October 19, on the anniversary of Cornwallis' surrender.

As set forth in its constitution, the objects of the society are "for the purpose of aiding in the preservation of historical records; to help to educate the people in patriotism and love of country; appropriately to mark and protect the last resting places of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; to collect and publish instructive material regarding the life and works of all the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and for all other patriotic purposes."

Only those who can trace descent direct from a signer are eligible to membership. The society's membership already covers practically the entire country, it having members in nearly every one of the forty-six states as well as in a number of foreign countries.

Eternal Fitness.

"Women are wonderful," said a man at the quick lunch counter. "A friend of mine sent me an invitation to the funeral services over her pet Angora cat that died in a fit. Now, I had never been invited to a cat funeral before, and I had no more idea than a rabbit what was expected of me. I was in a rush, and stopped in at an Italian florist's and told him to fix up a suitable design for me. He sent up a cat, life size, made of white immortelles, with a huge purple bow dangling from the end of its tail. The maid says my friend regarded it as a deadly insult to her feelings, and I wasn't even handed a rain check when I called."

Plumber Shows Grit in Minor Accident.

Charles Morehead, a plumber, displayed unusual grit yesterday afternoon after sustaining an injury by falling when boarding the train to return from Los Angeles, where he had gone to witness the circus.

In falling Morehead broke the little finger of his left hand, the bone protruding through the flesh. Notwithstanding this painful injury Morehead chatted pleasantly with friends on his way back to Bisbee. He was taken to the Copper Queen dispensary, where it was found necessary to etherize him in order to replace the finger. This was due to the fact that a small tendon or muscle had been twisted. Morehead insisted that the physicians replace it without the use of ether, but knowing how painful it would be they declined to do it.

Thieves and Humor.

The reason why cockneys are such smart thieves is that they have a keen sense of humor. The street arab picks your pocket while he grins at you. It is only stupid thieves who are serious. Poor Oliver Twist's seriousness was the cause of his arrest. The humor of the Artful Dodger and Charley Bates saved them.—Strand Magazine.
